From cave art to comic books, stories have been told through pictures for millennia. We'll look at works that combine words and drawings, and we'll explore techniques for creating our own. We'll consider questions like: What kinds of stories can be told through pictures? How can drawings give words new meaning? Exercises and assignments will include both collaborative and independent projects, culminating in a finished work. This course is open to all - no drawing experience is required, only a willingness to experiment and share!

Zoe Grueskin is new to Nome as a KNOM Volunteer. She has had a wide variety of teaching experience, including with the Cheng Yin Private Academy in Shanghai, China and the Duke-Durham Neighborhood Partnership in Durham, NC.
